

Edunomics Lab Analysis of State ARP Plans

ARP brings the largest one-time sums ever to State Ed Agencies for use at their discretion. The state ESSER3 set-asides total over $12B (some 3X the Obama-era Race to the Top funding).

It's for that reason the Edunomics Lab team has been reviewing SEA plans as they become available, with a focus on the financial dimensions. Since SEAs don't directly serve students, we're specifically curious about how and where those dollars will flow.

Given our financial focus, there are many areas of the plans that we aren't reviewing. Others in the field will examine them for different (and important) priorities not detailed here.

To date, US ED has received spending plans from 30 states. This analysis includes our quick review of 28 of them. Please reach out to any of us if you identify errors, omissions, or other questions.

Do SEAs have the capacity to carry this load?

*Includes SEA-convened communities of practice

Section E: How will LEAs be supported in drafting their plans?

Another common answer: “SEA will ensure LEA compliance”

“Require LEAs...”

“Audit LEAs...”

“Verify that LEAs...”

“Require assurances...”

“Review LEA plans ...”

“Regulate...”

“Measure whether LEAs...”

What’s the SEA role?

Help LEAs be effective

or

Monitor LEAs for compliance

Can SEAs do both well?

What plans are there for improving SEA data capacity?

“SEAs have limited capacity to do all that is expected of these agencies.” ~Marguerite, 2019

“ARP now provides a rare opportunity for SEAs to invest in data systems and expand data capacity.” ~Marguerite, 2021

Some SEA plans suggest that they are doing just that:

- DC, GA, NY, OH, UT, WV

DC: Strengthening data systems, including adding course-level data and early childhood data

GA: Modernizing information systems to include real-time visual and analytic tools
